To whom it may concern,

I am writing to dispute a late filing charge of $100 assigned to me by USAC. I am the new owner of about 50 payphones (as of April 2006) and I filed forms with USAC (using the online system) to establish an account. Since that time I have called on numerous occasions and was always told to calculate my fees but given the size of my business I would most likely always be "De Minimus" and not required to make a filing.

In the fall of 2006 I moved from a "Havertown, PA" address to my current location in "Philadelphia, PA" and I took great pains to change my address with USAC, again using the online system. In April, after the filing date and six months after I changed my address on the USAC web site, I received a notice from USAC (addressed to my old "Havertown" office and forwarded to my current address courtesy of the US Post Office) stating that I had to make a filing. I immediately contacted USAC and they stated that they don't use the addresses from the website and instead use the address from the prior years filing (the reason why I received the notice late). I find this practice ridiculous. Needless to say, I put everything down and immediately filed the form. I believe that my filing ended up being no more than 2-3 days late.

I found myself "de Minimus" once again except I have been charged with a $100 late fee, which I am appealing to be waived.
